This homo oeconomicus or femina oeconomica is therefore styled as a human Pavlovian puppie whose head can be turned and mouth can be made to water just by dangling sausages before their eyes. The model probably does fit quite a few human beings, especially those in financial markets, but also elsewhere.

Our findings suggest that SPB might be a general problem in Choice Experiments, in particular with regard to female respondents. In future applications of the method, analysts should be aware of this potential bias and take precautions in order to keep homo oeconomicus, or maybe rather femina oeconomica, intact. These precautions might include gender-specific use of one or more ICSs.
