Development Of

Distance Education

Over the next decade, distance education is sure to see some significant changes stemming from four specific areas. As distance education continues to evolve and move from the fringe of higher education to the mainstream there are and will be new challenges for the field.

As in our regular instruction, our distance learning remains focused on students' cognitive, physical and social-emotional development. Students will have both off- and on-screen learning activities that emphasize interaction and creativity and engage students in experiences that connect to current curriculum.
