This is an internal combustion engine I built sometime in 2001-2002. It took me about three months to build it evenings and weekends. At the time, I had a job where I spent much of my time driving, and I thought about this thing a lot. I didn't draw up any proper plans for it, but did a number of rough

An I.C. Engine from the home shop

The plans are well drawn and include two pages of construction notes. This is what is known as a "bar stock" engine, which means it does not use any castings. It uses flat and round metal stock that can be purchased from almost any metal or machine shop supplier. It is not a big engine so the cost of the metal should be modest.
