Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee's Inherit the Wind, like The Crucible, is a parable of the McCarthy era. It champions free thought, scorns intolerance, and, like Arthur Miller's great drama, uses Christianity as a symbol for the mentality it detests. Also like Miller's play, Inherit the Wind distorts history in order to emphasize its themes. Key alterations include the invention

by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee

Synopsis. Written by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, Inherit the Wind is loosely based on the famous 1925 Scopes "Monkey Trial" in Dayton, Tenn. In a sweltering summer courtroom, famous lawyers Clarence Darrow and William Jennings Bryan battled over whether John T. Scopes had violated Tennessee state law by teaching evolution in his classroom.

Baby don't fall in love with me I'll only bring you grief Baby, don't set your heart on me I'll only have to leave 'Cause the north wind flows through my veins Like my dad there's a dream in my brain In the morning I'll have to leave again That's how it is when you inherit the wind Inherit the wind Daddy, he was a traveling man I hardly knew his face Momma, she cried for him at night He never stayed in one place 'Cause the north wind flows through my veins Like my dad there's a dream in my ...

Inherit the Wind Lyrics

In the light of today's religious debates in the US, Inherit The Wind seems braver than ever, and Tracy's character is allowed several hard hitting outbursts which, one wonders, would remain as so powerfully expressed if rewritten for a modern retelling. When he says, "I don't swear for the hell of it.

Inherit the Wind (1960) - IMDb

Inherit the Wind was also intended, in part, and like The Crucible, as a commentary on the McCarthy hearings in Congress—which sought, in the 1950s, to "root out" suspected Communists in American political, social, and cultural institutions. The idea of mass hysteria, suspicion, and a "witch hunt" for agnostics, Communists, or other ...
