In Our Inner Ape, Frans de Waal, one of the world's great primatologists and a renowned expert on social behavior in apes, presents the provocative idea that our noblest qualities—generosity, kindness, altruism—are as much a part of our nature as are our baser instincts. After all, we share them with another primate: the lesser-known bonobo.

Our Inner Ape: A Leading Primatologist Explains Why We Are ...

The "Inner Ape" takes it's title from Helena Bonham Carter's answer to how she prepared for her role in the remake of the Planet of the Apes. It touches on the contrasts between bonabos and chimpanzees and their similarties to humans using anecdotes and results of studies.

Like Jared Diamond's The Third Chimpanzee: The Evolution and Future of the Human Animal (P.S.), Our Inner Ape: A Leading Primatologist Explains Why We Are Who We Are attempts to answer some of the big questions about humanity and human evolution. Like Diamond's books, this one will change your conception of human evolution and what it means to be human.

Our Inner Ape: A Leading Primatologist Explains Why We Are ...

The "old" morality we share with apes runs deeper than our rationality. Humans have two inner apes, and the clash between them is part of human nature. We can only change society by using our inner apes, not by turning against them.

Our Inner Ape (August 1, 2006 edition) | Open Library

We humans like to think of ourselves as the most supremely evolved species on the planet, elevated and distinct from all others. In his newest book, leading primatologist Frans de Waal debunks this idea. Drawing on nearly 20 years of research on chimpanzees and bonobos, our closest primate relatives, he shows how many behaviors we think of as uniquely human are, in fact, paralleled in the ape world.
