Passions Of The Soul Rene

In his final philosophical treatise, The Passions of the Soul, completed in 1649 and dedicated to Princess Elisabeth of Bohemia, René Descartes contributes to a long tradition of philosophical inquiry into the nature of “the passions”. The passions were experiences – now commonly called emotions in the modern period – that had been a subject of debate among philosophers and theologians since the time of Plato. Notable precursors to Descartes who articulated their own theories of the ...

Descartes and Passions of the Soul. Passions are in Descartes a real curiosity; in fact, Descartes is the thinker of the cogitor, i.e. the certainty of the subject's existence, that it to say an activity. But the passions are the dimension of passivity, the flaw that undermines man's free will. Thus, Descartes poses the problem of the passions as the problem of the action of the body (movement) and the actions of the soul (the will), extent (body) and mind (soul).
